- 93 Elizabeth I, second issue, shilling, mm. cross-crosslet, crowned bust l. (B&C 1A), rev. long cross fourchee over shield of arms (S.2555A; N.1985), the reverse slightly double-struck, otherwise extremely fine/ good very fine, virtually as struck, on a large full flan with a superb portrait £400-500

This is an extremely scarce date for this mintmark, since the mark was not actually introduced until 29 May 1574 – a full two months after New Year. The only possible explanation is that the new mark was added to old dies dated 1573 without then overstriking the final digit of the date.

- 99 Elizabeth I, fifth issue, shilling, mm. woolpack, possibly over tun on reverse, crowned bust l. (B&C.6B), rev. shield of arms (S.2577; N.2014), a little double struck on the obverse with a few light scratches, otherwise good fine/ nearly very fine £120-150

A group of pewter tokens or jettons

- 109 Elizabeth I, pewter token or jetton, undated, ?struck for the Accession, phoenix rising from flames, SOLA PHOENIX OMNIAE MUNDI, rev. bust of queen three-quarters l., wearing ruff, ET ANGLIAE GLORIA (M.I. 1, p.90/1; Mitchener 4500), holed and with a few patches of corrosion, otherwise superb quality for this base metal item, about extremely fine for issue and very rare thus £200-300

As stated in the footnote to lot 330 in the St James' Auction 4, the attribution of this item as an Accession medal may well not be correct. The portrait does not represent the queen at the time of her accession to the throne in the 1550s. The style of portrait and dress suggest a date much later in the reign and a very similar representation of the queen is to be found on the following extremely rare token which bears the date 1589. Also, Elizabeth did not adopt the phoenix as a personal badge until some time in the 1570s. Both these facts would suggest that there is no grounding for this token's traditional attribution as an accession medal.

- 110 Elizabeth I, pewter token or jetton, 1589, 24mm, bust of queen three-quarters l., wearing ruff, crown above, GOD SAVE THE QVENE, rev. Justice stg. with sword and scales, CONSILIO NIL NISI, date in exergue (M.I. 1, - ; Mitchener -), only poor to fair but extremely rare, less than six specimens traced £80-120

The similarity of portraiture on the last two lots suggests that the so-called 'Accession medal' should be dated to the 1580s.

- 111 Elizabeth I, pewter token or jetton, undated, 23 mm, crowned lion rampant l., within garter, rev. crowned arms of France between crowned pillars, E-T above (Mitchener 4612), flaw in edge and a little creased, otherwise very fine or better and rare this nice £80-100

This high-relief pattern, probably struck by Abraham Vanderdoort is quite unlike anything adopted for currency. It also bears little resemblance to the lower relief unites struck by Briot in the 1630s. It was probably felt that its medallic qualities made it unsuitable for general circulation. It seems that the king, however, took a personal interest in raising the artistic standard of the coinage – an interest perhaps stimulated by the collection of coins and medals formed by his late brother, Henry, prince of Wales.

- 144 Charles I, double crown, Tower mint, mm. anchor, fifth 'Aberystwyth' bust crowned l., wearing lace collar, mark of value behind, rev. crowned, oval, garnished shield, crowned CR at sides (S.2704; N.2172), scarce, good very fine with an excellent portrait £1800-2000

A rare mint mark, possibly less than 20 specimens known.

- 152 Charles I, Tower mint under parliament, crown, type 4, mm. (R), crowned figure of king holding sword, on foreshortened horse l., rev. oval, garnished shield of arms, (S.2761; N.2214), reverse flan flat, good fine £600-800

A rare mint mark, probably slightly scarcer than (P).

- 153 Charles I, Tower mint, shilling, type 1, mm. lis, crowned bust l., mark of value behind, rev. long cross over square-topped shield of arms (S.2782; N.2216; cf. Brooker 386), tiny split in edge, a few scratches on face, otherwise toned good fine/ nearly very fine £200-250

Brooker 530/31), a little weak in one quarter, otherwise good very fine and attractively toned £150-200

The present specimen has a group of four pellets to the right of the obverse mintmark and two similar groups on either side of the reverse mark. Although Brooker has almost thirty specimens of shillings of Sharp group F, none exhibits these elaborate extra marks (but see his 522 obverse and 529 reverse for less extravagant examples). It seems likely that these groups of pellets were some kind of extra moneyer's control mark, perhaps to do with the internal workings of the Mint or the Pyx trial.

- 156 Charles I, Briot's second milled issue, sixpence, mm. anchor and mullet / anchor, crowned bust l., mark of value behind, rev. long cross fourchee over square-topped shield (S.2860; N.2306), very fine or better £280-300

There seems to be no record of a proof maundy set for 1868 – these pieces, with frosted details and mirror-like fields, presumably come from a VIP set which would suggest that they are very rare indeed. Other odd proof strikings are known around this period, including proof shillings, sixpences and a maundy set all dated 1867.

An interesting and seldom-offered group of 1902 matt proof sovereigns.

The following accumulation of 1902 proof sovereigns was put together over a period of 30 years by a collector in Europe.

As is often the case, some of these coins exhibit minor scuffing and edge scrapes but most still retain their original proof surface.

An unusual offering – and one unlikely to be repeated.

The coinage of Russia developed very quickly during the reign of Peter the Great. Even as late as 1700, most of the coins in circulation had changed little since medieval times. By the time of Peter's death in 1725, the coinage had been westernised and was rapidly falling into line with the coins of the rest of Europe. While most of the coinage bears the imperial double eagle on the reverse, this short-lived series of 2 roubles, struck from 1718 to 1728, is unusual in its choice of St. Andrew for the reverse design.
